Auditory Perception

The primary purpose of this unit is to help the teacher evaluate the student's ability to understand and appropriately respond to verbal information. The exercises may also be used to help develop listening and following direction skills.

Each activity page features a column to be used to record the appropriateness or inappropriateness of the student's responses. There is also a place at the top of each page to note the score. The teacher is to use his or her own marking and scoring system.

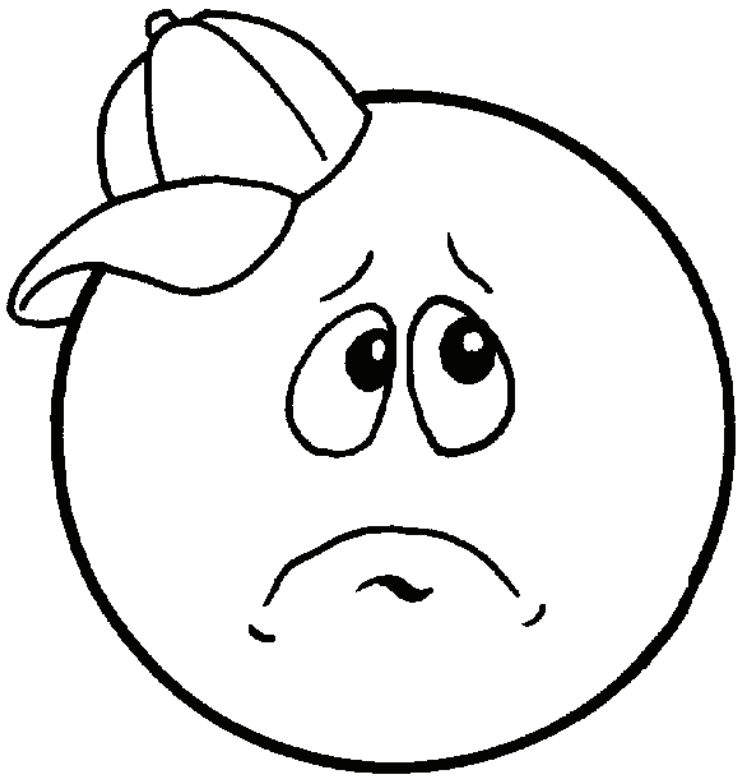

Results of the exercises can be used to discover areas of weakness that call for additional practice.

For those students who find verbal response difficult, picture response cards have been provided. Asking a student to respond with a card, rather than verbally, can also add an element of fun as well as provide a quiet atmosphere.

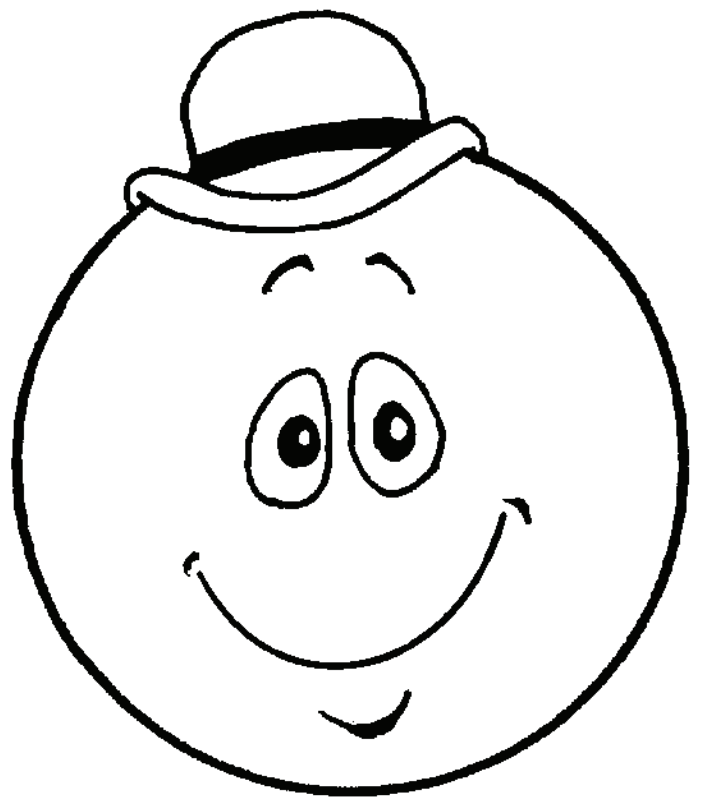

These activities work well for one-on-one instruction as well as with small groups.

The following pages are to be used with the cards that are marked as follows:
