A certain man had a donkey. For many years the donkey carried sacks to the mill without getting tired. Finally, the donkey's strength was worn out, and he was no longer of any use for work. His master began to think of ways to save money for his care.

The donkey, sensing trouble, ran away and started on the road to Bremen. There he thought he could become a town musician.

When he had been traveling a short time, he met a hound named Growler. The hound was lying panting on the road as though he had run his legs off.

“In the yard lies a black monster who hit me with a club. Up on the roof the judge is seated, and he called out, ‘Bring the rogue here!’ So I hurried away as fast as I could.” Never again did the robbers venture to the house. This pleased the four Bremen musicians so much that they never wished to leave again.
